Does your homeowners insurance allow Akitas?

Note regarding homeowners insurance: Many insurance companies maintain lists of excluded breeds of dog. These lists typically include Akitas, along with many others. This means that if you have one of these breeds, an insurance company may: 1. Refuse to write an insurance policy at all. 2. If you currently have a policy, and they learn that you have one of these breeds, they may revoke your insurance. 3. If there is a personal liability claim relating to your dog, such as an instance where someone is bitten by your dog, they may refuse the claim, in which case the liability would fall upon you. If damages were awarded by a court of law, this could represent a significant financial burden. It is your responsibility to determine whether or not your insurance provider has such a provision in your policy or not, and whether your personal liability is adequate to cover you in the event of a claim, and we urge you to review your policy with your agent to make these determinations.

Please tell us why you would like an Akita to be a member of your household:
